CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDIES

Of all the papers published in this city, the one which takes precedence for the great ability of its leaders, the versatility of its news, and the temper of its politics, is the Nacional. Whatever subject it takes up it handles well; it indulges in neither Government adulation nor open sedition, and whilst it appears to be the organ of neither party, it fearlessly criticises and censures the sins and errors of both. The independent reading public that hates a fulsome praise of the authorities as much as it detests open sedition in a newspaper, recurs with pleasure every evening to the Nacional, to find not only the news of the day, but sound, temperate, and well written leaders on the burning topics which have turned this city into a tented field, and we may say, the whole Republic into a vast military camp.

With indescribable satisfaction we read in Tuesday night's Nacional an admirable article upon the present terrible political situation, which showed, with great tact, that in the dispute between the province and the nation both the President and the Governor might be in error, and the proper arbiter in such a dilemma is not the rifle of the Tiro Nacional or the Remington of the soldier, but the Supreme Federal Court, a tribunal that, for the equity and independence of its judgments, has secured the esteem and respect of the whole country. Our colleague's article is so much to the point, and so clearly expresses foreign opinion on the subject, that it is with much pleasure we translate and publish it at foot; and to further our colleague's excellent views and to aid in the proper and constitutional settlement of the political difficulty which had almost overwhelmed us, we call attention to the news received by the last mail from the United States, and entrust the matter to the talented editor of the Nacional, fully persuaded that, with his great ability, he will bring the matter before the Argentine people, in order to show them how in countries similarly constituted, burning political questions, such as those that afflicted us, are peaceably and constitutionally settled.

We want no civil war in Buenos Ayres, and the splendid demonstration of the Tiro Nacional on Sunday proves this; for if the aim of the people was revolution rather than a peaceful and independent assertion of opinion, a wheel-barrow or a bullock-cart would have been sufficient for the purposes of a revolt. The people of Buenos Ayres merely wish to assert their rights, and to show to the people of the provinces that they are prepared to maintain them. And we are with them in their cause.

Political delinquency is not limited to this Republic; the same scenes that we witnessed, the same troubles that we suffer, are at present going on in the State of Maine, one of the oldest and most populous States of the North American Union; and the people of Maine, in their settlement of their political difficulties, shown us the way out of our Tiro Nacional trouble without firing a shot or wounding a citizen.

The following is a summary of the Maine Question and the manner in which it was so constitutionally decided:—

The deadlock in the Maine Legislature has been brought to a close, happily without the shedding of blood which at one time it was feared would take place, so high did party spirit run. The Fusionist Democrat party and the Republicans disputed as to which had secured the Legislature. The Fusionists seized the principal offices, and elected a Governor who was not recognised by the commander of the State forces, and whose orders to the military were consequently not carried out. A legal question arising out of certain illegalities pursued by the returning-officer at the election was in the meantime submitted to the Supreme Court by the Republicans. This court on Saturday pronounced the Fusionist Legislature to be illegal, and the Republican Legislature at once elected a State Governor (Mr Daniel E. Davis) and other State officials.

The Supreme Court of Maine on Friday night unanimously decided in favour of the legality of the Republican Legislature, declaring the Fusionist Legislature to be illegal. The Republicans are jubilant, and determined on maintaining their power. Many Republicans arrived at Augusta on Saturday to help General Chamberlain to maintain himself. In the State House, Mr Joseph Smith, Fusionist Governor, issued an order dismissing General Chamberlain, who declined obedience, saying that he would only obey the legal Governor chosen by the Legislature and recognized by the Supreme Court. Mr Smith then instructed the company officers not to obey General Chamberlain's orders, but all, excepting one company gave allegiance to General Chamberlain. The Republicans on Saturday held a caucus, nominating the full list of State officers to be elected by their Legislature. The Fusionist Legislature met and discussed the situation. Having appointed committees to decide what it was best in the circumstances to do, they adjourned till Monday.

The Maine Republican Legislature, having on Saturday evening elected Daniel Davis Governor, inaugurated him, electing also the full list of State officers. Three Fusionists acted with them. General Chamberlain immediately recognized Dan. Davis as Governor, giving him possession. The Republicans, now in full possession, are masters of the situation. Senator Blaine attended the Legislature, supervising the proceedings. Subsequently he made a brief speech, advising the Republicans to exercise moderation in their triumph.

The following is the article from the Nacional to which we have referred: and although all danger of civil war is now over, the lighted and sensible remarks of our colleague will be read with interest and pleasure:—

"LET THE COURTS DECIDE!"

"Here we have a President who demands obedience to a mandate issued in the name of the National Constitution, which he interprets to the best of his knowledge.

"Then we have a Governor who considers that the National Constitution imposes on him the obligation to resist this mandate, in which he sees an attack on the autonomy of the Federal State over which he rules.

"In a question of attributes and Constitutionalism neither side has a right to use force: The Governor may be mistaken; the President may be mistaken; perhaps both are in error.

"Supposing that the President is mistaken, would it not be a crime to shed blood to sustain the error of an infallibility which has been denied to human reason?

"Let us suppose that the President orders the Provincial Bank to be closed, on the ground that the Constitution prohibits the Provinces from coining money, and that the Governor resists the order on the ground that the Bank, as it now stands, is guaranteed by the deed of incorporation. Would the President have a right to bring in troops of the Line to close the Bank, on the pretext that the Governor had disobeyed him, and shown contempt for the National authorities?

"The Constitution has not provided that Force shall interpret and decide Constitutional questions, yet there must be some tribunal that has the right to decide them.

"This right is vested in the Supreme National Court, which has the right to interpret the Acts of Congress and even declare them to be null.

"Why has not the question whether the Governor is or is not bound to obey the decree of disbursement been laid before the Supreme Court, to be decided in a Constitutional manner? Why should we prefer what Sarmiento calls 'Krupp Law' to justice, reason and science?

"If the Supreme Court decide that the Act of Congress opposed to the Bill of Mr. Sarmiento was unconstitutional, and that the present decree in contradiction of said Act is in accordance with the Constitution, the Opposition will be placed in the wrong, the National Government in the right, and the crisis be over.

"It may be said that there is no legal way of bringing the question before the Supreme Court. Not so, as the Supreme Court is the Constitutional Judge of the Provinces.

"The United States did not stop at a mere question of form when Arbitration, which is not provided or even mentioned by the Constitution, was resorted to to decide the last Presidential election and avoid civil war. In presence of the civil war which threatens the Nation with death, let us prove ourselves more constitutional than even the United States, more Catholic than the Pope."

LATEST FROM EUROPE

London, Jan. 18.

The new year has set in with a certain feeling of uncertainty, although it is naturally hoped that it may prove more satisfactory than the last. In England we welcome the faintest signs of trade recovery just like sailors becalmed at sea who watch the symptoms of a breeze springing up when their patience is almost exhausted. On the Continent there is a tone of half-disguised uneasiness. Russia seems on the verge of violent changes. Germany is ready at a moment's notice for any emergency. France is in a state of acute transition since the fall of Waddington. Italy looks at present like a wayfarer in a fog. Spain depends for tranquillity upon the life and policy of one man, Canovas del Castillo. In a word, the year we have commenced may witness some improvements, but it is likely to be witness of many severe crises, perhaps of unforeseen changes, and changes in our present condition can hardly be unattended with calamities.

It is pretty evident that the policy of Great Britain will play a leading part in the destinies of Europe, and this policy will be entirely guided by the result of the coming elections, which are generally looked for as likely to occur in the Easter recess. Parliament is to open on the 5th prox., and the opening campaign will be short, sharp and decisive. The Cabinet still counts a nominal majority of 34 in the House of Commons, but the debate on the Budget will try its strength seriously. There is no doubt that the Government has lost prestige owing to the Afghan and Zulu wars, and its unpopularity has been augmented by the accidental misfortunes of the times. The distress in Ireland increases every day, and although London has sent £10,000 to the Duchess of Marlborough and the fund of Archbishop Macabe for relief of the sufferers, this can only go a short way. The Government offers of loans to public works are not taken by the landlords, partly because they are not on good terms with the peasantry, and partly because of the numberless formalities that must precede an advance of even £10,000. Meantime, the workhouses are half empty, because the people prefer to suffer hunger and cold with liberty. It is to be regretted that the wealthy classes in Ireland make no effort to remedy the distress. All the subscriptions up to date in Ireland are barely £3000, or less than the city of London has forwarded; while the deposits in the Irish banks exceed £41 millions sterling, say £7 per inhabitant, a ratio superior to any country of Europe except Denmark. The rich people in Ireland evidently wish the relief of their poorer brethren to come from other countries. Moreover, the peasantry refuse offers of free passage to New Zealand and Canada, and openly declare they mean to get the lands and pay no rents. This state of things is so serious that Mr. Gladstone hinted in Scotland the possibility of expropriating (not confiscating) all the landed property in Ireland by the State, and paying the owners in 3 per cent Consols, as was proposed to be done with the railways some years ago.

The rental of Ireland is £14 millions, which at 30 years purchase, would be £420 millions for the above procedure. If Ireland could raise the money herself the step would be easy, and the landlords would be only too glad to get the money. But as England would really have to find 9-tenths of the amount, or perhaps the total, there is little chance of people here consenting to increase the National Debt 55 per cent. It is possible, meantime, that Gladstone's hint on the subject may damage him at the coming elections.

If the present Government be ousted by a Liberal Cabinet that succeeds it will not hold together 12 months. Everybody looks forward to an undefined coalition, in which some men of both parties will hold office, perhaps Lord Derby, Mr. Goschen, Lord Granville, Lord Kimberley, Lord Dufferin and a few other tried statesmen. If the Conservatives win at the elections we shall have a continuance of Lord Beaconsfield's administration a la Bismarck, in which the Premier stands for the nation; his policy will be vigor combined with caution, and the H. of Commons will be kept in subjection. But as Lord Beaconsfield is an old man, and his Cabinet depends on his life, the position of affairs does not augur a long and secure line of action.

We have news this morning of the Russians having been driven out of Chikislar by the Turcomans, and having to take to their ships in the Caspian Sea. But Russia will be necessary send a dozen armies to put down the Turcomans, and the ultimate result is not doubtful.

Gen. Roberts telegraphs a victory yesterday over 5,000 Mohumnds at the Cabul river. Our loss being only one killed and 7 wounded; several hundred Mohumnds left on field.

For two days and nights there has been furious rioting at Budapest, arising from a duel between a nobleman and an editor in which the latter was mortally wounded. Several of the rioters have been shot by the troops.

Gambetta has been re-elected President of the Chamber, but the reduced number of votes caused it to be supposed he would resign, and take M. Freycinet's place as premier; the rumour proved incorrect, and France is now expecting the great battle in the Chambers on Jules Ferry's Article 7, for the exclusion of religious teachers from all schools.

Argentine bonds are 10 per cent lower than in November; this is partly owing to the payment of dividend, partly to alarming rumours from B. Ayres, of which no one seems to know the exact tenor.

The Central Argentine Railway has declared a dividend, and the expectation of large exports of grain causes a good impression here, which will be reflected in railway stocks of the republic.

Emigration is increasing, especially to New Zealand. One land-owner in this country says he has 48 farms on his hands, his tenants having all sold out and gone to New Zealand, which colony has just raised another loan for £5 millions; double the sum was subscribed for.

THE UNITED STATES

Philadelphia, Jan. 18th

Mr. Parnell spoke at Providence on Saturday night, closing his New England tour. He speaks at Chicago on Tuesday. Fall River has contributed $1,500 to Mr. Parnell's Irish Relief Fund, and Lawrence $800. Drexel, Morgan, and Co. had on Saturday collected $4,925 for this fund, making with the previous remittance to the Land League, 7,425, the amount of the fund received up to this date, an amount which will probably be increased by money in transmission and the Providence sum to $10,000, Drexel, Morgan, and Co. on Saturday added to the Lord Mayor of Dublin that $152 for the relief fund had been received from Stockton, California. San Francisco has collected $1,500, Los Angeles $800. All the collections, including Mr. Parnell's raised in the United States up to the present date for the relief of the Irish distress will probably aggregate $30,000. The Mayor of New York intends opening a relief subscription.

The Edison electric lights in Menlo-park are still burning to the extent of about 80 lamps. Mr. Edison, finding that defective vacuums have developed in a considerable percentage of the lamps, has for several days been experimenting to improve the mechanical construction of the glass globe containing the light so as to insure a permanent vacuum. Mr. Edison's friends report that he is able to overcome the difficulty. Meanwhile the manufacturing of additional lamps has been delayed, while no arrangements have yet been made practically to use the light in New York.

Dun's report of mercantile failures in the U. States throughout 1879 shows 6,658 failures, with $98,149,092 liabilities, against 10,478 failures with 234,383,132 liabilities, in 1878. The report of failures in Canada for 1879 gives the number of 1,902, with $29,347,937 liabilities.

The President will probably on Monday transmit to the Senate the nomination of an American Minister to England.

The New York Irish Relief Committee, auxiliary to the Irish Emigrant Society, will send $8,000 this week to the Lord Mayor of Dublin. The Mayor of New York announces that he will receive subscriptions for the relief, to be sent to the Lord Mayor of Dublin or to Mr. Parnell's fund. The Mayor of Jersey has received subscriptions to the amount of $1,225, for the relief of Irish distress.

Carmen de Arce, Jan. 24th.

Dear Sir,

Murders in the camp are now of such frequent occurrence, that the horrors of one hardly pass from our minds before the atrocities of another burst forth with the usual frightful terrorisms of such awful crimes.
